Whig and Courier.

BOUTELLE & BURR PROPRIETORS.
C. A. BOUTELLE, Editor.

All editorial letters about to be addressed to Boutelle & Burr, and communications intended for publication should be addressed "Editor of Whig and Courier."

MONDAY, JANUARY 21, 1889.

A subscriber to THE WHIG in Toledo, Ohio, complains that he receives his paper very irregularly and wants to know the cause. The answer is easy, namely, too much Democratic reform in the postal service. We receive similar complaints almost daily. One day last week one of three or four different bundles of Writus for August reached their destination. The service is in a shameful condition as regards this "reformed" orthodoxy of Cleveland, Wilts and Dickenson, all of whom, however, will in short time resume their private positions from which they were mistakenly called to play the role of statesmen.

The Omnibus State Amended Bill, which passed the House of Representatives but not even if accepted by the Senate, is still a puzzle now. Moreover, it was hatched with the full knowledge that the Senate would not accept it. The whole purpose of the bill is to postpone the admission of the two Dakotas and Washington Territories, whose claims for admission are unanswerable by giving them permission to adopt constitutions and apply for admission hereafter with New Mexico and Montana. It will remain for a Republican Congress to settle the territorial question on a basis of justice long deferred.

The Copperfield objects to ancient history. "This is not surprising in view of the disgraceful chapters in its career, but it does not profit my past experience being the same disreputable sheet, nor that it was years ago when the citizens of Niagara had to discipline it for its treasonable utterances. The difference between then and now is this: during the war it was a rebel and now it is a chameleon." His latest attack upon the patriotism of our city is absolutely and unadulteratedly false. It cannot bring a whiff of reliable evidence in support of its charge, but as we said before it smells and smells like a whiff of carbureted hydrogen. The editor is when challenged to substantiate its statement, just as its proprie-taries did when its combustible insulation were repudiated by Ward Three last fall by an indignate citizen.

The papers that champion the secret ballot in the State assume a tone of superior virtue that is highly amusing. They even carry their denunciation to the point of denouncing only those who believe in the corruption of the ballot oppose this bill. Dassily such ridiculous talk as this will make voices for the measure in the Legislature, but we doubt it. Men are not going to be deterred from expressing their honest convictions, if opposed to the change in the election laws, by such tactics. The question is now before the people for consideration and the like, that those who do not believe in the necessity for so radical a change in our electoral system as to have their voices assented to, say the least, a most remarkable condition of affairs. Our own jealousies our tempers should remember that honest men sometimes differ in their opinions.

The Senate will have another infusion of New England blood when Hon. William D. Washburn of Minnesota, take his seat as the successor of Senator Sibley. Mr. Washburn is born in Liverpool, the State and his wife is the daughter of the late Hon. Frank M. Mizzy, of Bangor. Graduating from Bowdoin in the class of 1851 Mr. Washburn held law in the office of his brother, in Bangor, was admitted to the bar in 1857 and soon after removed to his present home in Minnesota where he developed a successful business. Mr. Washburn, four months having a world wide reputation. A most sagacious and successful business man Mr. Washburn will enter the Senate equipped with valuable experience derived from service in the popular branch of Congress to which he was elected ten years ago by 3,025 majority and re-elected by 12,000 at the expiration of his first term.

Commenting on the failure of the Indiana Democrats to make out a strong slate Col. Dibble the Chicago Inter Ocean says:

"The Democratic managers of Indiana were unable to furnish a ground for even reasonable suspicion that any person in the State had received a letter from Dibble or any other person indicating any Republican to do any unlawful thing appropriate to the Presidential or local election. Col. Dibble comes up with the formula without a name, and the name he gives open his garments. This is a master stroke upon which the Republicans can congratulate itself; it places the entire Indiana majority in its own State beyond the reach of any real political influence.

Those States in which Democratic Governors make short planks, were disappointed by violation of the Constitution of the United States and the violation of the Constitution of this State, being rejected."

Col. F. M. Drew, well known in this city, is making an earnest effort for the position of Department Commandant of the Grand Army of Maine. Equally for the purpose of gaining the good will of the Grand Army men in this City Col. Drew has been in constant touch with the men who will present to the present Legislature his will interest every Grand Army man and every soldier and sailor and their families in this State. The provisions of their plan were intelligently cast and fairly counted those States in which Democratic Governors make short planks, were disappointed by violation of the Constitution of the United States and the violation of the Constitution of this State, being rejected."

We give the above paragraph in full as it illustrates the conflict usually going on in the different departments of the Commonwealth. The contrast between this rather complimentary reference to the bill for the State to stand between your gallant defenders or widows and the alms house, and the bill for the National Government to afford relief to your gallant defenders now dependent upon private or public charity, which was voted by President Cleveland, is very striking. When Congress passed a bill to do away with the "necessity" of making the old veterans "public paupers" and Grover Cleveland's veto is in obedience to the demand of the Senate, the Commercial editorially, commented the President and insulted every old soldier by calling them as "ridiculous," to add the treasury of the United States, through the Government is simply able now by reason of the glorious valor of its defenders to have them freed from the poor Florida voted for Cleveland and his free trade policy, but now that the election is over the Jacksonville Board of Trade petition Congress to impose a duty of one dollar a box on all imported oranges. This is Democratic consistency.

The New York Sun is not favorably impressed with the foreign policy of President Cleveland with his strong record of non-intervention, surrenders, territorial expansion, and weak alterations of blates and back down." This is Democratic opinion.

Distroes Among English Nail Makers. — (Boston Journal.)

When some disclosure were made during the Presidential campaign of the depressed condition of the South, Stamford and Westerly manufacturers, makers of the free trade organico food of Writus for August reached their destination. The service is in a shameful condition as regards this "reformed" orthodoxy of Cleveland, Wilts and Dickenson, all of whom, however, will in short time resume their private positions from which they were mistakenly called to play the role of statesmen.
